DATA PROTECTION CONSULTING

Data protection focuses on personal data from a legal perspective. Personal data is any information relating to identified or identifiable natural persons.

WHY IS DATA PROTECTION LAW IMPORTANT FOR YOU OR YOUR COMPANY?

The manager of personal data can be a natural person, a legal person or any other organization without restriction.

Taking into account the exceptionally wide scope of personal data and the fact that basically anyone can be a data manager, we can declare that all companies have to face a potential obligation of complying with data protection law requirements.

WHAT RISKS COME WITH A VIOLATION OF DATA PROTECTION RULES?

Based on the Information Act currently in force, the cap on the fine that may be imposed in the case of a data protection infringement is 20 million forints, which will increase substantially upon the entry into force of the new data protection regulation (GDPR) in May of 2018.

WHY SHOULD YOU TURN TO US WITH DATA PROTECTION LAW QUESTIONS?

Our employees specializing in data protection are experts qualified and have extensive experience also in competition law, intellectual property, corporate, labour and economic law.

A data protection infringement may have significance in other fields of law also; be it civil law in which the right to the protection of personal data qualifies as a specified right relating to personality or criminal law. A violation of a specified right relating to personality committed together with a data protection infringement may imply parallel data protection law and civil law sanctions.

In criminal law, an abuse of personal data qualifies as a crime. If the data protection authority identifies a grounded suspicion of commitment of a criminal act during a procedure, it will initiate a criminal procedure.

Data protection related non-compliance may have a serious risk formulated in various branches of law, which may, in certain cases, arise parallelly in the efficient management of which you may rely on the expertise of our legal team.
